Office Hours: Monday (10am-noon) and Wednesday (10am-1pm)

Objective:

This course is an exploration of the ways identity figures into politics and politics figures into identity. Through films, readings, projects, and discussions we delve into the generators and effects of the identity categories nation, ethnicity, religion, race, gender, class, and culture. By the end of the course you should be able to dissect many of the “us” versus “them” identity conflicts that go on every day and impact your day-to-day life without your even knowing it.

The course is also designed to stimulate your skills at academic inquiry. We will not be passive scholars! This means learning to read and understand advanced level social science texts, intelligently critique films as texts that fit into a society and have an impact, and apply commonly used research methods to answer a question of your choosing on the relationship between identity and politics.

Student Learning Outcomes:

This course is designed such that students who have immersed themselves in the material, attended lectures regularly, done the readings, completed all assignments diligently, and studied for exams, should be able to do the following by the end of the course (items in parentheses are the primary, though not exclusive, measures used to evaluate the extent of these learning outcomes):

- The student will understand how identity is theorized by political scientists (Exam 1).
- The student will identify significant debates over the meaning and politics of national, ethnic, gender, race, cultural, religion, and class identities (Exam 1, Exam 2, Book Review).
- The student will understand the ways in which identity politics impact their personal lives (Reading Summaries).
- The student will apply accepted social science research methods to study a particular category of politicized identity with primary self-collected evidence (Research Paper).

Requirements:

Though it may be altered slightly and/or clarified by professorial edict either in class or via email, consider this syllabus a contract between you and your professor that lists both what you can expect from class and what is expected of you. Check it regularly and bring it to class with your notebook. You are expected to read EVERYTHING assigned on the syllabus, which averages around 100 pages a week. You are also expected to attend EVERY lecture. Visiting me on occasion during office hours to discuss issues raised in class and/or paper topics will not hurt either. If you do these things you will do very well in the course. If you do not do these things you will not do so well in the course. Consider this fair warning up front.

You will be evaluated in this class based on your performance in 5 areas. These areas, along with their relative weights, are as follows:

Exam #1 (25%) – given out in-class on Tuesday 12 October. The exam will cover all material from the readings and in-class discussions for Weeks 1 through 7. If you miss a class over this period, it is your responsibility to get notes from one of your colleagues. The exam will include both short answer and essay questions. There will be NO review sheet. Excused late or early exams will only be given in extreme circumstances and with adequate documentation as determined by your professor or prior permission (at least two weeks in advance) from the professor. Unexcused late exams will be penalized at a rate of 10 points per day. If you miss an exam it is YOUR responsibility to contact me as soon as possible to schedule a make-up.

Exam #2 (25%) – exactly like Exam #1 in format but covering material from Week 1 through Week 15. It will be administered during the assigned final exam period on Thursday 14 December. A heavy emphasis will be placed on lessons covered after Exam #1.

Reading Summaries (10%) – There are assigned readings for eleven of our meetings. For four of these meetings you should produce a reading summary and turn a hard copy in the box outside my office at least 24 hours prior to the class where those readings are assigned. You may choose the four sets of readings that best fit your interests and schedule. The only meetings that are off limits are the meeting at which you are responsible for handing in a book review. Reading summaries should be NO MORE than a page long (1 inch margins, TNR 12 point font, single-spaced). They should contain a thorough, but concise, abstract of the text(s), a personal evaluation of the text(s), an attempt to map the text(s) in the context of the course, and three questions related to the text(s) you would like to see answered during our class discussion. These assignments will be graded and should be written, rewritten, and thoroughly edited. Late assignments will not be accepted.

Book Review (10%) – Over the course of the semester we will read Anderson's Imagined Communities, Butler's Gender Trouble, and Fanon's Black Skin, White Mask in their entirety. You are responsible for reviewing one book which will be assigned to you. If you want to change your assigned text you should do so before the final class in Week 2. After Week 2, you will not be allowed to switch books without approval of the instructor at least a week before the book is covered in the classroom. Book reviews should be NO MORE than 3 pages long (1 inch margins, TNR 12 point font, single-spaced). You should identify the work's research question, thesis, and succinctly outline how the author's argument progresses from research question to thesis. You should also include a discussion of how the book fits into the literature on the politics of identity (this may require additional reading). Your thoughtful and appropriate personal evaluation of the text should comprise your conclusion. Book reviews are due prior to the class we discuss the text via Blackboard/Turnitin. You should come to this class with five copies of your review and be prepared to lead a small group discussion of the text. Papers turned in after class has started will receive a 0 without prior approval from the professor. Papers whose authors do not present the material will also receive a 0. Since you are using this assignment in part to teach your colleagues, these harsh late and absentee penalties should serve as a reminder that it is disrespectful to the entire class not to take this assignment seriously.

Research Project (30%) – As a class we will conduct several research projects using self-collected primary data via a survey, personal interviews, direct observation, etc. By the end of Week 2 the class will be divided into groups of between 3 and 6 students. You may create these groups yourself, or if you are not in a group by the end of Week 2, I will assign you to a group. Once in groups, you will decide on a research question that deals with one of the identities we discuss in class and craft research methods to help you answer this question.

On Tuesday 7 November you will, as a group, present your findings to the class. Your group work and presentation will be graded and worth a fifth of your research project grade. In addition to the fact that the presentation is graded, this presentation should be taken seriously as it is an excellent opportunity for feedback from your professor and colleagues before your research project paper is due.

Four-fifths of your research project grade will be based on a paper you will write as an individual. This paper should be NO MORE than 15 pages long (1 inch margins, TNR 12 point font, double-spaced) and include an (1) introduction, (2) a literature review, (3) a summary of your group's methods, (4) a reporting of your group's data, (5) a conclusion that includes a thoughtful critique of your group's work, and (6) a works cited page. Papers are due by noon on Tuesday 21 November via Blackboard/Turnitin. Late papers will be penalized at a rate of 10 points per day.

Important Due Dates:

Exam #1	12 October
Exam #2	14 December
Book Review
Anderson	19 September
Butler	10 October
Fanon	26 October
Research Project
Class Presentation	7 November
Paper	21 November
Reading Summaries	Throughout the Semester

Grading:

The course letter grade will be determined according to the following scale:

Letter Grade	Quality Points	Numeric Scale*
A	4.0	93-100
AB	3.5	88-92
B	3.0	83-87
BC	2.5	78-82
C	2.0	73-77
CD	1.5	68-72
D	1.0	60-67
F	0.0	Below 60

*I will round up at the .5 and NOT before. For example, if you earn an 87.49 you will receive a B for the class. If you earn an 87.5 you will receive an AB. The only exception to this rule concerns the line between a D and an F. If you make below 60 points, even if it is by the smallest fraction of a point, I will NOT round up.

General Information:

These are a few things every student should know.

Emergency Conditions - In case of any adverse condition or situation which could interrupt the schedule of classes, each student is asked to access www.ut.edu for information about the status of the campus and class meetings. In addition, please refer to Blackboard for announcements and other important information. You are responsible for accessing this information.

Special Needs - If there is a student who has special needs because of any disability, please go to the Academic Success Center in North Walker Hall for information regarding registering as a student with a disability. You may also call (813) 257-5757 or email disability.services@ut.edu. Please feel free to discuss this issue with me, in private, if you need more information. Once registered with ASC we can figure out a mutually agreeable way to meet your individual accommodations.

Classroom Disruption Policy – The University of Tampa has a policy covering disruptive classroom behavior. The policy will be applied in this course and is detailed in the Faculty Handbook Chapter 6 Section XI (available online at www.ut.edu/provost).

Mental Health Counseling – College can be a stressful time in a young person's life. The American Psychiatric Association published a recent study of college students observed over the course of a single academic year. Over 60% of students reported feeling things were hopeless one or more times, almost 40% of the men and 50% of the women reported feeling so depressed that they had difficulty functioning one or more times, and 10% of the students reported seriously considering attempting suicide at least one time. If at some point during your time at UT you begin to feel depressed or out of control for any reason you should realize that you are not alone and there is help available to you. Your professors are happy to counsel you on the problems you are having coping with academic life, but there are dedicated mental health counselors available to you through UT's Health and Counseling Center located at 111 North Brevard Ave. (behind Austin Hall) who you may feel more comfortable disclosing certain types of non-academic problems to. The time to deal with mental health issues is when they arise and not after your grade has deteriorated. Their email is healthcenter@ut.edu and their phone numbers are 813-253-6250 (during business hours) and 813-257-7777 (outside of business hours for emergencies).

Academic Assistance – The Academic Success Center (academicsuccess@ut.edu) in North Walker Hall offers free peer tutoring, credited academic skills courses, national testing services, and services for students with disabilities. The Saunders Writing Center (323 Plant Hall, x6244) aids students with their writing projects. You pay for these services through your tuition and there is no shame in using them if you need help with your course work. I am more than happy to discuss any academic issues you might have during office hours but if I think one of these services can help you be more successful I will not hesitate to recommend it.

Academic Integrity – The University of Tampa is committed to the development of each student to become a productive and responsible citizen who embraces the values of honesty, trust, fairness, respect, and responsibility. The scholarly community at The University of Tampa strives to instill values that uphold academic integrity and promotes an ethical standard that does not condone academic misconduct. Violation of academic integrity and academic misconduct tarnish the reputation of the University and discredit the accomplishments of past and present students. Sanctions for violation of academic integrity and academic misconduct include a failing grade in an assignment or in the course, or suspension or expulsion from the University. I take integrity very seriously and will monitor all submissions and exams for violations of the academic integrity policy. I also expect professional behavior in class that fosters an environment encouraging not only your learning but the learning of your peers. Students are held responsible for knowing and observing the University's Academic Integrity Policy (available online at www.ut.edu/provost). If you have any questions about the policy, please feel free to talk with me.

Class Rules, Etiquette, and Advice:

I like my job a lot. There are few things I can imagine doing more satisfying than providing inquisitive minds with an atmosphere conducive to thinking more critically about their own assumptions and the world in which we live. The image of students leaving my classroom just a bit more prepared to make their society better is sustaining. Following is a list of things you can do to help me maintain this image as well as some things you can do to reveal it as a mirage. Doing more of the former and less of the latter will make me happy whereas the converse will make me sad!

DO read the assigned texts – The amount and content of the reading assignments are well within the realm of reasonable for a class at this level. I have looked at syllabi from many different institutions of higher learning to come confidently to this conclusion. Do the assigned readings before each class and you will get the most out of the lectures. Though there are some things covered in the assigned readings that will not be covered in lecture, and vice versa, the lectures and readings build off each other. I will not hesitate to pull exam questions from readings not covered in class and from lectures not covered in the readings.

DO engage in class discussions in an intelligent way – There will be lots of opportunities for you to contribute to conversations in the classroom. Most of my lectures have a built in component for student input because I think it is important that you not only read and hear the information, but have to reconstitute and challenge it. I am also delighted to entertain questions when you have them and follow tangents that you would like to explore. Class periods when students are engaged and contributing seem to go by much faster than class periods when students are checked out. Students who regularly contribute to the classroom conversation do significantly better than students who do not on exams. So pretend the information we are covering is really interesting and jump at the opportunity to challenge the material. After a while you will find that you do not have to pretend any more. If you are shy this is good practice for you. Use the class to build your confidence and public speaking skills. If you are worried about your peers' impressions of you forget about it. Those who value education will find your contributions useful and those who roll their eyes are dull and uninteresting.

DO NOT be tardy or leave class early – If you come in late to class enter quietly and sit somewhere where you will not disturb other students. Classes will begin promptly as scheduled so you will need to copy notes from one of your colleagues on lecture days if you feel like you have missed something important. On assignment days you will not be given extra time for your tardiness. If you show up without an excuse 5 minutes before an exam is finished, you will only have 5 minutes to finish the assignment. If you miss an assignment because of tardiness you will need to consult that assignment's make-up policy.

Class is done when I say something to the effect of "see you next class" and not before. I will do my best to end class on time if not a few minutes earlier. There will, however, be some class periods where I might need to go over time by a minute or two to finish an important point. Out of respect for your fellow classmates you should NOT begin filing papers into your book bags before class has officially ended. I realize that there will be classes where you have a job interview or a club activity or a plane you need to leave early for. By all means let me know before class that you need to leave early, arrange with someone in class to take notes for you, and do not miss your important event.

DO NOT use cell phones, computers, or recording devices in class – There is a boatload of research suggesting students learn more during lectures when they take notes the old fashioned way with paper and a pen or pencil. Even if you do not buy this evidence or consider yourself an outlier, electronic devices prove distracting to your neighbors.

DO NOT ask if it is on the exam – I do not give out study guides. This is a university class and when I attended university ages ago study guides, like the iPod and indoor plumbing, were not yet invented. This experience taught me that learning things the readings and lectures cover that are not on the exam can be just as important and enlightening as learning things that will appear on the exam. Anything in the readings or lectures is fair game for an exam. Things covered in both readings and lectures, which I post online in the form of Powerpoint slides, are slightly more likely to show up on the exam.

DO NOT ask for extra credit – Rarely I give out extra credit opportunities. When I do, the opportunity is initiated by me and open to all students in class. I have never given an extra credit assignment to a student who initiated the request. Giving out extra credit opportunities to select students makes grades for my courses unreliable measures of student success and your goal should be to master the material assigned on the syllabus.

DO understand what your grade represents – I assume every student who enters my class wants to take away a greater understanding of the world and that the grade (s)he receives is but a formal, and somewhat abstract and imprecise, reflection of the knowledge (s)he has gained. The average student in my courses typically earns a low B (3.0) or a high C (2.0). This grade represents both effort and skill so students that put in more effort than average and/or are more skilled than average will do better than this, whereas students who put in less effort than average and/or are less skilled will do worse. It is not easy to earn an A in my course and few will. On the other hand it is even more difficult to earn an F in my course but a few students every semester put in nearly no effort and/or do not have the skills necessary for a college-level course in Political Science. I have given failing marks to students who I think are wonderful people and given A grades to students who I would rather never see again. Grades are not personal statements on your character, they are a professional opinion of the work you submit.

DO learn how to question grades respectfully – I do my best to communicate expectations and make sure my comments on graded assignments pinpoint areas where you did well and areas where you needed to put in some more work. There will, however, occasionally be questions about the grade you receive. I will NOT change a grade or let you resubmit an assignment simply because you want a better grade. If, however, you think I have made a mistake I will consider changing a grade only after the following conditions have been met: 1) You must wait at least 24 hours but no more than ten days after receiving your graded assignment to file a complaint. 2) You must submit in writing (typed and printed out) a detailed explanation of why you think you deserve a different grade. I will review your submission and give you my final decision within a week of receipt at which time I will consider the “negotiation” complete and any further appeals on the issue will be directed to the department chair. Challenges that resemble “I’m an A student so there is no way this paper is a B,” “I was making a good argument it just did not come across in my paper,” “I was having a bad day can you cut me some slack,” or “I need to pass this class to graduate” will be summarily dismissed as they do not speak to the quality of the work.

DO NOT send me an email unless it's an emergency – With several classes and nearly 100 students a semester emails can become burdensome. While I know email seems convenient from the student point of view because it is more instantly gratifying and relatively labor free, I have found the method of communication a poor way to convey the complex concepts we deal with in class. So how can you decide if an email is an emergency? I would encourage you to ask yourself the following three questions:

- 1) Can I find the answer on the syllabus, in a text, or online?
- 2) Is it something one of my colleagues in class can answer?
- 3) Can it wait until next class or office hours?

If you answer any of these questions in the affirmative, PLEASE fight against the temptation to hit send. Also if you submit an assignment by email I will NOT grade it. Most assignments I have submitted via Turnitin and those few which require hardcopies there is a drop box on the outside of my office door.

DO visit me during office hours – If you have a question about something we covered in class, need feedback on an assignment, want to discuss something you discovered outside of class that you think connects to course content in an interesting way, or just want to chat FEEL FREE to drop by my office during office hours. I keep five hours per week and these hours are for you. You are not pestering me or taking me away from something more important. It is nice to talk with students outside of our regular classroom setting.

DO know the university policy on “excused” absences – The UT catalog has a section on “excused absences.” It falls under the heading “Class Attendance and Participation” in the Academic Policies and Procedures section. There are no excuses for late papers. You know about them well in advance and a last minute illness or death in the family should not affect your ability to turn in the assignment or have a colleague do so on your behalf. Excuses for missed exams or presentations are granted following university procedures. The best way to be granted an excused absence is with prior approval. If you will miss an exam or presentation due to a previously scheduled event, let me know at least two weeks in advance and you will almost always be allowed an early exam or presentation. In the event that prior approval is not possible, you must provide acceptable documentation detailing the reasons for your excuse as soon as possible. Be thorough with this documentation as the burden of proving an absence is excusable falls on the student. For each assignment listed in this syllabus there is a detailed policy regarding late penalties. Many of these policies grant an exception for “excused” absences. Whether an absence is “excused” or not is up to the discretion of your professor based on the guidelines outlined above.

DO understand that I am interested in discussing your progress in the course with you – If you have a parent, coach, drill sergeant, etc. who is interested in learning about your status in this course feel free to share it with them. I post grades on Blackboard and the syllabus explains in detail my weighting formula so you have access to all the information I do regarding your current standing in the class and may share it with anyone you want.
